Mobile Learning Product Guide 2013

Why Focus on Mobile Learning?

Regardless of the specific trend – be it 1:1 programs, BYOD programs, or something in between – mobile technology is having a permanent impact on education. Student engagement and performance have been shown to increase exponentially through the integration of technology into instruction, so schools are enthusiastically and aggressively embracing these trends.

As of this writing...

80%

of IT decision makers within education have implemented or intend to implement mobile device management solutions that can scale across all devices.

$10.3 billion

worth of computing devices were installed in K-12 institutional settings – this is projected to increase by as much as 7.5% annually for the next two years.

95%

of security decision makers in education reported data security as a top priority over the next 12 months.

The scale and speed of this adoption have created a tremendous opportunity to support these initiatives with relevant products and implementation expertise.

When your customers plan to implement, or have implemented, a mobile learning program, think about the questions they might overlook:

- Do you have cases to protect your individual devices?
- How will you store your devices?
- How will your devices be charged?
- Do you have a data security solution?
- How will content be managed and deployed to devices?
- What input devices or peripherals will support your objectives and subject matter?

By asking these questions, you can position yourself as a mobile learning expert and close incremental sales using mobile learning solutions from The Douglas Stewart Company. Our product categories are aligned to support the diverse needs of mobile learning, and our Account Managers are equipped with the insight you need to sell strategically into these programs. Read on for the highlights of our mobile learning lineup, and be sure to visit us online at www.dstewart.com for the full breadth of our product offering.
