A SHOPPER'S HIGH

ARE WE SHOPPING OURSELVES OUT OF A BAD MOOD?

Tammy Faye Bakker once said, "I always say shopping is cheaper than a psychiatrist." America's shopping addiction has a new name: retail therapy. Whether we want to admit it or not, U.S. adults have been busily shopping their worries away. But does this retail high last? Here, we take a look at the aftermath of a shopping spree to find out whether buying really plays positively on our emotions.

PURCHASING HAPPINESS

"Whoever said money can't buy happiness simply didn't know where to go shopping." - Bo Derek said retail therapy made them feel happier afterward.

1 in 4 U.S. Adults admit they have gone shopping in pursuit of retail therapy.

Twice as many women than men said they've shopped to elevate their mood.

FASHION ADDICTIONS

"I like my money right where I can see it—hanging in my closet." - Carrie Bradshaw, Sex and the City of U.S. adults said using coupons to save money gives them a thrill or rush.

said they have celebrated good news by going shopping for themselves said they have hidden purchases from a significant other.

said they feel guilty shopping for themselves when they don't need anything.

said retail therapy didn't put them in a better mood.

admitted they felt guilty after shopping in search of retail therapy.

Clearly, a shopping spree won't cure a serious case of the blues, but we'd be lying if we said we've never experienced the high of buying something new for ourselves or a loved one. The thrill of a new purchase may not last long, but the short-lived boost can still help us get over that mid-day slump or shake off a bad Friday night date. And sometimes, that quick burst of happiness over a new sweater is just what the doctor ordered.

Research Smarter.

As a researcher, your students are constantly juggling different roles and demands on their time.

Share selected groups of references, manage team access, and track activity and changes

Uncover the impact of references and find the best-fit journal for your papers

Automatically create, format, and update bibliographies, with the convenience of remote access

Students can sync EndNote and EndNote Web libraries so all references, attachments, and groups in one can be accessed from the other. They can track references and find their favorites with new rating and status tools. They can see more with the expanded layout options to make better use of their screen. They can email a reference, including file and figure attachments with one click. They can also use the PubMed direct export format to import records in fewer steps. Allows for one account but can be installed on up to 3 devices.
