MOBILE AND SOCIAL MARKETING TRENDS

In a digital world, shopping habits are changing drastically, driven by the prevalence of mobile devices and the influence of social media platforms. Today, consumers are increasingly turning to their smartphones and social networks not just for social interaction, but also as primary channels for discovering, researching, and purchasing products.

According to Statista, mobile commerce sales are projected to reach $7 trillion globally by 2025, highlighting the shift towards mobile-first consumer behavior. The adoption of mobile payment technologies, including digital wallets like Apple Pay and Google Pay, has accelerated mobile commerce. These platforms offer convenience, security, and speed, further encouraging mobile shopping, so including a virtual way to check out online and in-person will become increasingly important.

Social media platforms have evolved into powerful shopping channels. Features like shoppable posts, product tags, and in-app purchases enable users to discover and buy products directly from their social feeds, so venturing onto these platforms will both boost knowledge of new products and eventually sales. Social media serves as a platform for brands to communicate their products, commitments, and engage with socially conscious consumers.

PRE-MADE LESSON PLANS TO HELP TEACHERS

Creating lesson plans for weeks after weeks of school can be hard and stressful, mainly if you need to adapt lesson plans to how your students learn. Douglas Stewart understands how stressful and time-consuming lesson planning can be. That's why we partner with educational companies that have lesson plans created with their products so teachers can engage and teach students STEAM solutions.

w:onder
workshop

Wonder Workshop's comprehensive curricular resources enable teachers to help students practice computational thinking and 21st-century skills with robots with no coding experience needed. They have hundreds of pre-built standard-aligned curricula for learning how to code, applied robotics, and cross-curricular lessons plans for STEAM learning.

kai's education

Kai's Clan brings multiple cross-curricular learning experiences to the classroom to engage and motivate students. Kai's Clan lesson activities are broken down into roles and are assigned to different students depending on their skill levels. Students can progress with themed lessons to boost interest in coding.

3Doodler EDU

3Doodler offers hundreds of free standard aligned lesson plans in a range of STEAM subjects that can be filtered by grade, skill level, and standards. All of their lesson plans can be made with 3Doodler Start+ for a younger audience, and the 3Doodler FLOW for students 14 and older. The 3Doodler Start+ is also safe and accessible for blind or visually impaired students to join the learning fun.
